

Wings Business School's Masters Degree, which leads to a Master's degree in Business Administration, has been the school's flagship programme for more than eight years and has consistently been among the top-ranked programmes in the world. This two-year curriculum has produced notable entrepreneurs, business leaders, and great managers. Despite the MBA's name, its alumni have traditionally contributed equally to a wide range of disciplines other than traditional business, sectors that need knowledge and competence in management. Their contributions span almost every industry, as well as non-profit organizations, government and policy, research, and academia.

The programme provides a diverse selection of engaging courses and activities, all of which are taught and directed by great faculty members who are constantly engaged in academics, research, and practice. The curriculum trains learners to think critically and creatively in order to solve complicated real-world management challenges. It pushes individuals to attain high levels of excellence and allows them to reach their full potential.

Aside from traditional curriculum, the programme allows students to pursue personal interests such as community service, athletics, developing particular talents, and learning new skills through student organizations and activities.

Incoming participants join a cohort that includes fresh graduates from a variety of disciplines, professionals with work experience in a variety of sectors such as finance, consulting, IT/ITeS, FMCG/Retail, Engineering, PSUs, and others, a gender mix, and a variety of professional and extra-curricular interests. A collection of mandatory courses in the first year of the programme provide a solid foundation for all participants across all functional areas of management.

Participants create their own specialty in the second year by selecting courses from a wide choice of electives that can be studied in any order. Many participants want to expand their knowledge of general management (across functional areas), for which Wings Business School is well renowned. Others specialize in specialized areas of management, such as marketing, finance, systems, and human resources.

If you're considering an MBA at Wings Business School, I welcome you to take on the challenge. Congratulations on your success if you are a new student! In terms of raw numbers, this is perhaps the most difficult programme to get into anywhere in the planet. If you are a current Wings Business School student, you have already begun to grasp what an MBA at Wings Business School entails. Prepare for a life-changing and enlightening experience in any case!
